I Want Him To...

I want him to take my hand in his hands
And say me to forget everything happened
In the past few days.
I want him to see straight into my eyes
Until they fill with tears.
I want him to be at my side
Until I bend down upon him.
I want him to wipe off my tears
With his own hands.
I want him to say a few words
About my love for him
Which I could never express.
I want him to understand
My unspoken words,
My unwritten letters and unexpressed emotions.
I want him to become
The unquestioned master of my soul rather body.
But if he doesn't do so.....
I am always there to do this for him...
Even if he doesn't bother this,
Even if he doesn't care this,
Even if he doesn't understand this.

Not for his sake I do all this
But for mine rather but
He never understands and perhaps

He can never.....that he is not someone else,
Not my part, not my heart only,
Rather he becomes I.
He has been I since the time I can recall in my memories..
...Not part but...whole of me has become he.
He and I have mingled into one another, have become one, One soul.....in my feelings,
.....In my thoughts,
.....In my own world of... the unspoken words...

A Sudden Shock

A sudden shock of mind and a brutal fall
A loosened faith on hope but Chooses its own way and Deep to deeper goes.
 An absurd chaos of this world,
But a chronicle struggle to prove existence
From journeys now and thence,
Full of dreamy illusions,
Lots of biased divisions and
Leading a life in death
Sans respect, sans dignity and sans glory in every breath.
 Though how many challenges but a hell
How many blurred visions and misfortunes fell?
Every star does not blemish its shine
Still having a pure, unscarred love to thine,
Facing the unpleasant realities of
A world chaotic everyday
And struggling to survive in lifeless hell

To create my own niche.
Though journeys long and tiring,
Full of dreamy illusions and biased divisions
But striving to gain respect,
Dignity and glory in every breath
That I can find my own way
To live a victorious life before death.
